-San Diego Union Tribune Endorses Prop 4 as common sense, common ground-

San Diego Union Tribune slams Proposition 4 critics, citing popular support among California voters in a September 23, 2008 editorial.

Questioning the oppositions' "adamant objection to requiring parental notification or family notification in the few cases of parental abuse," the editorial begs: "Under what other circumstance would these critics contend that the suspected abuse of a child by her parents should not be reported to authorities?"

Opponents of Proposition 4 "misread the public" states the Union Tribune, noting that most Americans want abortion to be "safe, legal and rare." Supporters of Prop 4 note that the 34 states with parental involvement laws have found that these laws reduce teen pregnancies and abortion.

The editorial notes that, unlike earlier parental notification propositions, Prop 4 allows notification of adult family members in lieu of parents in certain circumstances. The San Diego Union-Tribune concludes: "This time, it is a significantly improved proposition," and "It should pass."
